CURRENT TOPICS.

THE NEW SUPREME COURT FUNDS RULES will come into operation on Wednesday, the 1st of September, and we print elsewhere some regulations issued respecting the operation of rule 24 of those orders.

ON THE second day of the Chancery Vacation Sittings Mr. Justice STIRLING had before him a list of fifty cases, and, although he again sat until half-past five, he did not reach within ten of the bottom of the list. Evidently six hours and a-half on one day in the week are hardly sufficient for the disposal of chancery business in vacation.

WITH REFERENCE to the Vacation Sittings it is proposed by Mr. Justice STIRLING that he shall sit in court for chancery business on Wednesday next, and on Wednesday and Friday, the 8th and 10th of September, and that there shall be no sitting in court during the week commencing on the 13th of September. The arrangements for the week commencing on the 20th of September rest with Mr. Justice GRANTHAM, who, it is presumed, will carry out those laid down in the vacation notice.

THE EXTREMELY troublesome problem of the definition of a bond fide traveller has suddenly re-appeared, a bench of Yorkshire magistrates having been called upon to decide whether a person who, after traversing the statutory distance, has obtained Sunday refreshment is still entitled to claim his privilege in the event of his visiting a second licensed house in the same town. The justices apparently thought that the status of bond fide traveller could only be revived by traversing a fresh distance of three miles, but the statute appears only to contemplate the original starting point, without reference to what is done by the alleged traveller on any part of his journey.

THE COMMENCEMENT in August of a new Session of Parliament has this year curtailed the "silly season," and has postponed for a time the usual newspaper discussion as to the merits and demerits of the Long Vacation, so that legal gossip is almost restricted to the rumours of impending judicial resignations. The report of the Vice-Chancellor's retirement has been so often circulated that it is generally received with credulity, but the greatest regret will be felt if Sir JAMES HANNEN should find himself unable to resume his seat for the Michaelmas Sittings. As the last of the Judge-Ordinaries and the first of the Presidents, it has fallen to his lot to amalgamate the old and the new systems of procedure in connection with the various branches of his Division, and it will be a hard task for Lord HALSBURY to find a thoroughly-competent successor for him. It will be remembered that his immediate predecessor, Lord PENZANCE, also resigned his seat on account of ill-health, but that he so far recovered as to be afterwards able to render valuable public services not only upon the final appellate Tribunals, but also as Dean of the Arches, and it may be hoped that, in the event of Sir J. HANNEN's retirement, means may be found for rendering his great ability and long experience still available for the public service.

THE QUESTION of the proper measure of damages payable by a co-respondent in a divorce suit appears to have been very imperfectly understood, and there is a striking absence of authority on the subject. In Comyn v. Comyn and Humphreys (33 L. J. P. M. & A. 210) Sir CRESSWELL CRESSWELL directed the jury to take into consideration the same circumstances which were formerly considered in actions for crim. con., such as the husband's caution or carelessness, the terms upon which the husband and wife had lived, and the general conduct of the co-respondent—"not that you are to punish the man, but the general conduct of the defendant—the mode in which he proceeds to obtain the affections of the lady—is important for your consideration." Again, in Cowing v. Cowing and Wallen (33 L. J. P. M. & A. 149), the same learned judge told the jury that the amount of the co-respondent's property was immaterial to the question of the assessment of damages unless he had used it "as a means of seduction." This ruling appears to be consistent with what was said by ALDERSON, B., in James v. Biddington (6 C. & P. 589), which was an action for crim. con.—namely, that the amount of the defendant's property was not an element in the case, and the latter judge also pointed out the distinction between damages for adultery and damages for breach of promise of marriage. Notwithstanding these authorities an idea has recently prevailed that the measure of damages is in some way dependent upon the co-respondent's pecuniary position; but, in the recent case of Keyse v. Keyse and Maxwell (11 P. D. 100, a report of which also appears in the current number of the WEEKLY REPORTER), Sir JAMES HANNEN took some pains to put the matter clearly before the jury, reminding them that they had not come there to punish, and laying down that they had only to compensate the husband for the loss which he had sustained by reason of his wife's misconduct, and to consider to what extent such loss was the result of the co-respondent's action. The question of the husband's conduct was, however, material, especially where, as in the case before the court, he had not troubled himself to ascertain where his wife was, or whether she was provided with sufficient means of support since her separation from him. In answer to the question of a juror, the President emphatically stated that the amount of the co-respondent's means had nothing to do with the question, since the damage to the husband would be the same whether the former was a rich man or a poor man.

THE CASE of Harding v. Harding (34 W. R. 775) is an important authority as to the right of the assignee of a debt to maintain an action against the creditor. The executors of a deceased person sent to one of the beneficiaries of the will, who was in Australia, an account of the balance due to him from the testator's estate, and he afterwards returned the account to them with a memorandum at the foot instructing them to pay the balance due to him to his daughter; whereupon the executors wrote a letter agreeing to comply with his request if the daughter could give a valid receipt for the amount. The executors were sued by the daughter as assignee of the debt, and, on appeal against the decision of a county court judge, who had held that the action would lie, it was argued for the defendants that there was no valuable consideration for the assignment to the plaintiff, no valid equitable assignment, and nothing more than an imperfect gift to which no effect could be given by a court of equity. The Divisional Court, however, held that the assignment was complete, and that a valid trust had been created in favour of the plaintiff. Mr. Justice WILLS laid great stress upon the circumstance that the defendants had assented to the transfer of the obligation on condition that the plaintiff could give a valid receipt, and he pointed out that her father's unrevoked authority for her to receive the money would enable her to do this, so that the defendants had given such a consent to the transfer as would constitute them trustees for the plaintiff. Independently, however, of the executors' assent, the section 25, sub-section 6, of the Judicature Act, 1873, enabled the assignee of a chose in action to sue in his own name, and the credito had done all in his power to complete the assignment and to satisfy the requirements of a court of equity. Mr. Justice GRANTHAM also pointed out that, according to the old authorities in equity, the assignment need not have been for valuable consideration, and he therefore held that, the original creditor having done everything in his power to complete the transfer, and the debtors having, in effect, declared themselves trustees for the assignee, the assignment was enforceable by the court.

By a PARLIAMENTARY return shewing the receipts and expenditure of the High Court of Justice and the Court of Appeal during the year ending the 31st of March, 1886, there would appear to be still a considerable deficit in the cost of the administration of justice, which in that year amounted to £151,888, although this deficit has, for the last four years, been decreasing. In 1883 the deficit was £241,437, in 1884 it was £201,588, and in 1885 £157,543. The principal receipts consist of £103,384, the dividends on chancery stock which has been, in fact, cancelled. Then there are items for brokerage, £10,866, and fees of taxation, £14,057; lunacy percentages amount to £11,194, and the district registries bring in £21,818 for fees. There are a few smaller items, and this side ends with the sum of £368,524 for procedure fees making up a total of £530,210 received. The payment side of this account shews a first item of £149,470 for salaries of judges, including £6,000 to the Lord Chancellor; next, £18,535 for retiring annuities of judges and chancellors. Salaries of officers, &c., amount to £293,482, and pensions, &c., of officers to £86,728. The expenses of district registries of the High Court amount to £15,808, and of the Probate Court to £43,717. The marshals of the judges on circuit receive £2,689, and the circuit expenses of the judges and their suites are set down at £9,996. A sum of £5,167 is charged as the proportion of salaries and other expenses of the clerks of assize, &c., applicable to the business of the High Court on circuit. The amount paid on account of scrivency is £10,511, and to the stationery office for stationery supplied, £19,469. Rent, rates, taxes, repairs, furniture, gas, and fuel cost £23,281. These, with a few other items, bring up the total of expenditure to £682,098. It is impossible to throw any doubt upon the correctness of these figures so far as they go, but among other items it would be satisfactory to see brought into the account would be some proportion of the large revenue which is collected in the Probate and Divorce Registry in respect of what are called death duties, which should be made applicable towards payment of the expenses of that division and its district registries. Other items might be indicated which, by properly reducing the amounts charged as payments, would shew a much smaller deficit than £151,888.

ONE OF THE most difficult problems of criminal law arises in cases where a person, in attempting to commit one offence, has unexpectedly committed another one, whether of the same description or not. In Rex v. Hunt (1 Moo. C. C. 93) the prisoner had intended to stab A., but, in attempting to do so, had unintentionally stabbed B., and it was held that, as there was malice in fact, he was guilty of wounding B. On the other hand, in Reg. v. Pembilton (L. R. 2 C. C. R. 119), where the prisoner was charged with having unlawfully and maliciously damaged a window, and the jury found that, though he had thrown a stone at some persons in the street with whom he had been fighting, he had no intention of breaking the window, the court held that there was no mens rea and no malice. The recent case of Reg. v. Latimer (L. R. 17 Q. B. D. 379) was like Rex v. Hunt, for the prisoner had struck at a man with a belt, but had, in so doing, unexpectedly wounded a woman who was standing by. He was convicted under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 20, for unlawfully and maliciously wounding, but a case was reserved in order to determine the question whether Reg. v. Pembilton was an authority in favour of the accused. The court, however, pointed out that, in the earlier case, the prisoner had contemplated injury to the person, but had only caused injury to property, whereas, in the case before them, the act committed was identical in its nature with that which the prisoner had intended and attempted to commit; and Mr. Justice MANISTY pointed out that, as the prisoner, in the unlawful and malicious act of striking the man, had unlawfully and maliciously wounded the woman, the finding of the jury that he did not expect to injure the latter was wholly immaterial. Lord COLERIDGE also drew attention to the fact that in the section under which the conviction had taken place very general words were used, there being nothing said about a malicious intent, while the offence provided against was wounding or inflicting grievous bodily harm upon "any other person." In the face of the finding that the prosecutrix was, in fact, wounded by an unlawful and malicious blow, it is undoubtedly difficult to see how the special intention or expectation of the prisoner as to the result of his act could be in any way material.

CONCERNING SEARCHES.

SEARCHES FOR TERMINABLE CHARGES UNDER LOCAL AND PERSONAL ACTS.

THE following searches may occasionally be required:—

(1) The Landowners Drainage and Improvement Company's Act.—In the office of the clerk of the peace of the county, or in the papers kept by the churchwardens of the parish where the lands are situate, for contracts, orders, and certificates made under the Landowners Drainage and Improvement Company's Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. cxxii., local and personal), see section 14, which are also filed in chancery. Where the lands are settled, the costs and expenses may be charged on the land (section 20) by an order made on petition in chancery, and raised by mortgage under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 101 for any term of years.

(2) The West of England and South Wales Land Draining Co.—In the office of the clerk of the peace of the county or in the papers kept by the churchwardens of the parish where the lands are situate, for orders, contracts, and certificates made under the West of England and South Wales Land Draining Company's Act (11 & 12 Vict. c. cxlii., local and personal) see section 35. Where the land is in settlement, the Land Commissioners may make an order charging the inheritance with the costs and expenses (sections 12, 33), and the limited owner may raise the same (under section 36) under the provisions of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 56, in which case they are to be repaid by twenty-five annual payments (section 37); or under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 101, or by mortgage for a term.

(3) The General Land Drainage and Improvement Co.—In the register of orders and charges kept by the General Land Drainage and Improvement Co. at their office, 22, Whitehall-place, under their Act 12 & 13 Vict. c. xci., local and personal (section 74). The Land Commissioners may make orders charging the inheritance with the costs and expenses (see sections 56, 57); and the land owner may raise the amount (section 69) either by mortgage or under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 56, in which latter case the amount is repayable by twenty-five annual payments (see section 70). There is power to apportion the charge (section 87), but no apportioned rent-charge can be less than £1.

(4) The Lands Improvement Co.—In the register of orders and charges kept by the Lands Improvement Co. at their office, 1, Great George-street, Westminster, under their Act 16 & 17 Vict. c. cliv., local and personal (section 61), and if the land is situated in Middlesex or Yorkshire in the county register (section 54). The Land Commissioners may make orders charging the inheritance with the costs and expenses (sections 41, 48, 49) by way of periodical payments extending over a term of not less than fourteen or more than twenty-five years. See also the Amendment Acts (18 & 19 Vict. c. lxxiv.), local and personal (section 12), repealing and re-enacting with alterations section 48 of the principal Act (22 & 23 Vict. c. lxxvii.); local and personal, by which, inter alia, section 41 of the principal Act is repealed and other provisions substituted (section 24); (26 & 27 Vict. c. cxl., local and personal), containing provisions for releasing part of the land from the charge.

(5) The Land Loan and Enfranchisement Co.—In the register of orders and charges kept by the Land, Loan, and Enfranchisement Co. at their office, 22, Great George-street, Westminster (see their Act 23 & 24 Vict. c. clxix., local and personal, section 67), and if the land is situated in Middlesex or Yorkshire in the county register (section 47). The Land Commissioners may make orders (sections 37, 38, 39) charging the inheritance with the costs and expenses by way of periodical payments extending over a term of not less than fourteen or more than twenty-five years. The company also has power to advance moneys for the payment of compensation under the Copyholds Act (see sections 40, 41). See 23 & 24 Vict. c. xiv., local and personal, correcting a clerical error in section 53 of the principal Act. The principal Act contains (section 72) power to apportion charges, but "so that no charge charged under such apportionment shall be less than twenty shillings for each half-yearly payment."

CHARGES NOT REQUIRING REGISTRATION.

(1) 8 & 9 Vict. c. 56.—In connection with the above-mentioned Acts it should be observed that, under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 56, which repeals and re-enacts, with alterations, 3 & 4 Vict. c. 55, the owners of settled estates are enabled, with the sanction of the Chancery Division, to charge the inheritance with expenses incurred in certain improvements to be repaid by annual instalments, which in no event are to exceed eighteen in number. An order as to the procedure under the Act was made on the 4th of March, 1846, and will be found in Morgan's Chancery Acts and Orders, 3rd ed., p. 671. There is no provision for a registry of charges made under the Act, but it is believed that the Act has been very rarely employed, and the possible existence of such charges is neglected in practice. The cases as to the practice under the Acts will be found in 2 Daniell's Chancery Practice, 6th ed., p. 2223.

It is extremely unlikely that the existence of a charge of this nature will be overlooked by the vendor, as he has to make annual payments of the instalments to his trustees.

(2) The Agricultural Holdings (England) Act.—Where a landlord pays compensation to a tenant under the Agricultural Holdings (England) Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 61), he may obtain from the county court a charge on the holding, or any part thereof, of the amount so paid, to be repaid "to him, his executors, administrators, or assigns," with interest by instalments. Where the landlord is not an absolute owner, no instalment or interest is to be made payable after the time when the improvement is to be taken to be exhausted according to the award, if any, or the opinion of the court.

If the land is sold while the landlord, in whose favour a charge of this nature is made, remains tenant for life, there is but little risk to the purchaser, as, whether he discovers the existence of the charge or not, the conveyance made by, or with the concurrence of, the tenant for life, will vest the land in him free from the charge; but, if the sale is made after the death of the landlord in whose favour the charge is made, so that the conveyance (to which the personal representatives of the landlord are probably not parties) does not free the land from the charge, the purchaser runs some risk owing to the great difficulty of discovering whether such a charge exists.

No register is kept of these charges. They cannot be discovered by inquiry on the land. They are only made when a tenant quits his holding, so that no payment in respect of the charge is made during the lifetime of the landlord in whose favour it is made, the result being that at his death the remainderman may be in ignorance of the existence of the charge. A prudent purchaser will, therefore, make inquiries from the personal representatives of every deceased tenant for life, whether they know of any such charge being in existence. Possibly, also, it might be worth while to inquire from the registrar of the county court whether he remembers such a charge having been created. It will be observed that it is impossible for the purchaser to satisfy himself as to the non-existence of such a charge in the absence of the legal personal representatives of the tenant for life. Similar remarks apply mutatis mutandis to charges under the repealed Agricultural Holdings Act (England), 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 92).

The number of bills of sale published in England and Wales for the week ending August 21, was 233. The number in the corresponding week of last year was 216, shewing an increase of 17, being a net increase, in 1886, to date, of 334. The number published in Ireland for the same week was 14. The number in the corresponding week of last year was 16, shewing a decrease of 2, being a net increase, in 1886, to date, of 136.—From Kemp's Mercantile Gazette.

SERVICE OF NOTICE FOR ATTACHMENT.

II.

We will now consider what was the law as to notice of attachment when the Judicature Acts and the Rules of 1875 came into force. At that time the application for an attachment was made at common law by motion in court for a rule that the writ should issue; and, with two exceptions, such rule was only a rule nisi in the first instance, which would not be made absolute unless it had been personally served on the person whom it was sought to attach (R. G. H. T., 1853, r. 163; In re Guard, 6 Jur. 916). The two exceptional cases in which the rule for an attachment was made absolute in the first instance were: (1) For non-payment of costs, as between party and party, on a master's allocatur; (2) against a sheriff for not obeying a rule to return a writ or bring in the body (R. G. H., 1853, r. 168; 2 Lush. Q. B. Pr. 3rd ed.). Thus at common law a writ of attachment could in general only issue after personal service of a rule nisi, but in the two exceptional cases just mentioned there was no service of notice or otherwise; and therefore service of the rule nisi, or of notice for an attachment on a party's solicitor was necessarily futile.

In chancery it was provided, by Consolidated Order 29, r. 3, that a person prosecuting a decree or order directing another person to do an act within a limited time should be entitled, at expiration of such time after service of the order, and on the latter's default in doing the act, to a writ of attachment. Such writ issued generally without any order of the court. A special order, however, was required to attach a defendant for want of an answer, with this exception—a party prosecuting a decree or order which had not been complied with, could, without service or notice of any kind, have a writ of attachment sealed and issued on furnishing evidence and filing, at the proper office, the prescribed affidavit (G. O., 28 Feb., 1632; G. O., 20 May, 1859; G. O., 15 Nov., 1660; Garden v. Rose, 16 Sim. 578). A writ of attachment so procured was issued entirely at the risk of the person procuring it, and if it was wrongfully procured he had to answer for the consequences. By the General Order made under the Debtors Act, 1869 (W. N., 1870, p. 53), Consolidated Order 29, r. 3, was abolished; by rule 9 of that order it was provided that leave to issue an attachment against a defaulting trustee or solicitor under section 4 of the Act might be obtained ex parte; and by rule 10, that an application to commit to prison, under section 5 of the Act, for default in payment of a judgment debt, should be made by motion on notice to the party sought to be committed, and that the practice applicable to motions to commit for breach of an injunction should, so far as possible, apply to motions to commit for such default. Subject to the cases covered by rules 9 and 10, the old mode of procuring an attachment for non-compliance with orders of the court was preserved by the General Order under the Act of 1869. Thus, when the Judicature Acts came into force, no service, notice, or order for an attachment to issue for contempt was required by the Court of Chancery, unless the attachment was (1) for want of an answer, in which case a special order of the court was necessary; or (2), under section 4 of the Debtors Act, 1869, against a defaulting trustee or solicitor, in which case leave to issue the writ was necessary, but might be obtained ex parte; or (3), under section 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869, for default in payment of a judgment debt, in which case leave to issue the writ could only be obtained on notice of motion according to the practice of obtaining a committal for breach of an injunction. "The distinction between an order for committal and an attachment for contempt was formerly considered to be, that committal was the proper remedy for doing an act prohibited by injunction or the like; whereas attachment was the remedy for neglecting to do some act ordered to be done. Committal for contempt never took place except by order of the court" (Harvey v. Harvey, L. R. 26 Ch. D. 654, per Chitty, J.). Besides contempt by breach of an injunction, contempt by interference with a ward of court, or by interference with the administration of justice, was punished by committal. "By R. S. C., 1883, ord. 42, rr. 7, 24, attachment and committal are apparently placed on the same footing; and in a case of Sprunt v. Pugh (L. R. 7 Ch. D. 567), in which I myself was counsel, the late Master of the Rolls stated his opinion, though it does not appear in the report, that the distinction between committal for attempt and attachment for attempt was practically abolished" (per Chitty, J., in Harvey v. Harvey, ubi sup.). Committal for breach of an injunction, then, could only, even formerly, have been obtained by order of the court; the usual mode of applying for each order was by motion on notice personally served on the party sought to be committed, although Lord Lyndhurst, in Durant v. Moore (2 Rus. & My. 38, 34), following Rudge v. Hughes (Reg. Lib. B. fol. 1782), where Lord Eldon held that an order nisi for committal for contempt was not irregular where there had been personal service of such order. In Angerstein v. Hunt (6 Ves. 488), Lord Eldon says:—"It is not the practice in this court for a man to shew cause why he should not stand committed. The motion ought to be that he shall stand committed for breach of the injunction, and it ought to be made on personal service upon him that the court will be moved for that purpose." In Ellerton v. Thirsk (1 Jac. & W. 376), on a motion to commit defendant for breach of an injunction, the notice of motion had been personally served only on the clerk in court; and the defendant's counsel insisted that personal service was necessary, but offered, if the motion were postponed for a few days until some affidavits were prepared, to appear upon it for defendant without a new notice being given. Lord Eldon: "I think he must be personally served. I should not like to make an order for committing a party, though counsel should appear for him, if I knew that he had not been served; another notice is, therefore, necessary." The authorities to which we have just referred established the rule that notice of motion to commit for breach of an injunction must be personally served. It was, however, within the power of the court to make a special order for substituted service of such notice where the party in contempt had purposely absconded (Pulteney v. Shelton, 5 Ves. 147), without such special order personal service of the notice was absolutely indispensable, otherwise no committal would be granted.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS ACT, 1883.

[To the Editor of the Solicitors' Journal.]

Sir,—Will you kindly favour your readers with your views on section 52 of the Agricultural Holdings (England) Act, 1883, as compared with section 53? I cannot understand how the county court judges could act on the Act before it came into force.

DRAFTSMAN.

[There should in strictness have been a provision that section 52 should come into force on the passing of the Act, but this provision would be implied; and, at all events, a bailiff authorized by a certificate dated after the passing of the Act, but before the 1st of January, 1884, would be duly appointed.—Ed. S. J.]

CASES OF THE WEEK.

CASES BEFORE THE VACATION JUDGE.

Re SOUTH KENSINGTON ELECTION, Ex parte SPEED—Stirling, J., 25th August.

PRACTICE—ELECTION RETURN—APPLICATION FOR ORDER ALLOWING AN AUTHORIZED EXCUSE—SERVICE—VACATION JUDGE—JURISDICTION—CORRUPT AND ILLEGAL PRACTICES ACT, 1883 (46 & 47 VICT. c. 51), ss. 34, 56.—REVENUE OF COURT, 1883, ORD. LXIII., r. 12.

In this case a question arose as to whether the vacation judge had jurisdiction to give leave to serve notice of an application of a candidate, under section 34 of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Act, 1883, on the opposing candidate and the election agent. The application was made on behalf of Henry Fearnside Speed, lately a candidate for the borough of South Kensington, for an order allowing an authorized excuse for the failure by him to transmit a return and declaration respecting his election expenses for the election of a member to serve in Parliament, held in the month of July, 1886, or that such other order should be made as to the court should seem right. This was a motion for leave to serve notice of the application on the opposing candidate and the election agent. Section 56 of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Act, 1883, provides that, "subject to any Rules of Court, a jurisdiction vested by this Act in the High Court may, so far as it relates to indictments or other criminal proceedings, be exercised by any judge of the Queen's Bench Division, and in other respects may either be exercised by one of the judges for the time being on the rota for the trial of election petitions, sitting either in court or at chambers, or may be exercised by a master of the Supreme Court of Judicature in manner directed by, and subject to, an appeal to the said judges." Ord. 63, r. 12, of R. S. C., 1883, provides that "the vacation judges may sit either separately or together as a divisional court, as occasion shall require, and may hear and dispose of all causes, matters, and other business to whichever division the same may be assigned. No order made by a vacation judge shall be reversed or varied except by a divisional court or the Court of Appeal, or the judge who made the order. Any other judge of the High Court may sit in vacation for any vacation judge." It was contended on behalf of the applicant that the High Court had the whole jurisdiction, therefore the vacation judge could exercise the power; any power exercised by a judge on the rota for the trial of election petitions could be exercised by the High Court. The return should have been made within thirty-five days, which time had expired, and there were serious penalties. STIRLING, J., made the order giving leave to serve notice of the application on the opposing candidate and the election agent for the first day of next sittings.—COUNSEL, Percy Gye. SOLICITORS, Capel, Curre, & Ball.

CHANCERY REGISTRARS' CHAMBERS.

REGULATIONS CONCERNING THE TRANSMISSION OF SCHEDULES TO THE PAYMASTER.

Supreme Court Funds Rules, 1886, r. 24.

The entering clerks will transmit schedules direct to the Paymaster immediately after the order is entered.

For this purpose the entering clerks will keep a book or books in which will be entered the title of each order and its date, and the book containing these entries will be sent, with the schedules, to Room No. 106, where the chief of the room then present will sign the book by way of receipt for the schedules then left.

It will be observed that in no case will a schedule ever be in the hands of the solicitor, and, as a fact, the Paymaster will refuse to accept schedules by any other channel than through the entering clerks. By this means a complete record will be preserved of all schedules in the hands of the Paymaster.
